1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Hoelscher.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claim 2 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoelscher.

Hoelscher discloses all of the claimed subject matter except for having a 5/16 inch cavity and a 1/4 inch cavity. It is noted that Hoelscher discloses:

“is adapted to fit...all standard sizes of valve stems”,

“a plurality of concentrically arranged squared portions...being successively smaller”, and

“axially aligned sockets progressively decreasing in size...correspond to the diameters of the various squared portions 86 found on standard valve stems used in connection with radiator valves or other valves”.

Thus, Hoelscher discloses forming the plural sockets with standard sizes related to valve stems. The examiner takes Official Notice that 5/16 inch and 1/4 inch valve stems are notoriously old and well known in the art. Consequently, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the plural sockets of Hoelscher with standard sizes related to valve stems such as 5/16 inch and ¼ inch cavities as such sizes are known in the art.

5. Claims 3-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoelscher as applied above, in further view of Erm and Ruhlander et al.

Erm discloses a cylindrically-shaped socket. It is noted that it is notoriously old and well known in the socket art to form sockets as cylindrically-shaped. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the socket of Hoelscher as cylindrically-shaped as such would have been an obvious variation in shape as taught by Erm.

Ruhlander et al discloses a generally elliptical-shaped handle. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the handle of Hoelscher as generally elliptically-shaped to enable the tool to be gripping and rotated as taught by Ruhlander et al.

6. Claims 5-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoelscher in view of Erm as applied above, in further view of Hoff et al.

Hoelscher discloses a handle having a handle socket therein for receiving an end of a shaft "20" and a socket having an opening in one end for receiving the opposite end of the shaft "20". Hoff et al discloses force-fit connections between a shaft, a socket, and a handle. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the connections of Hoelscher as force-fit connections to enable the engagement and release between the shaft, socket, and handle allowing for interchangeability as taught by Hoff et al.

Art Unit: 3723

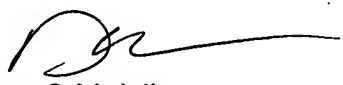

7. Claims 7-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoelscher in view of Erm and Ruhlander et al as applied above, in further view of Hoff et al.

Hoelscher discloses a handle having a handle socket therein for receiving an end of a shaft "20" and a socket having an opening in one end for receiving the opposite end of the shaft "20". Hoff et al discloses force-fit square connections between a shaft, a socket, and a handle. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to form the connections of Hoelscher as force-fit square connections to enable the engagement and release between the shaft, socket, and handle allowing for interchangeability as taught by Hoff et al.
